We are inclined to think that this church building has ample glass surface to give sufficient light natural light to the interior for practical purposes, at least 50% more than St. James Cathedral, which many people think too dark, and that the glass should have been more transparent and not quite so much of the heavy colored stuff. During the winter months there is much cloudy weather, along with considerable fog. Are very fond of the rich reds and blues, but want to impress upon us the fact that we had better not go too strong on these heavy stuff colors, as they might be criticized for disclosing the light
