General Information: "My notion is to have them - one idea at least - possibly the Parables and the Miracles, in a nice type of grisaille, with the medallion shapes filled with colorful ornament, which will, at least in three instances, will be replaced by medallions. In other words, the idea is a gradual development, because they are getting a very interested congregation, and gradually, with the subjects determined upon, the medallions will be enriched without greatly changing the color scheme of the windows.

We may use the idea of the old and new Testaments in Parables and Miracles, or we may have the whole group related to the New Testament, with old Testament prototypes.

There are ten so-called aisle or nave windows, and two a little narrow in the north end, which is the entrance end, and then there are three very narrow windows 10 3/8" wide by 57" high, that are in a sort of a little narthex, and the middle window fronts on the street. They want something in there that will be a kind of an announcement of the Church - a cute little angel of prayer or praise. I gave a price of $500 for it, and it is to have a nice short verse on prayer or praise - "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, etc" or something like that (look up good one on prayer).

Very soon I want to make at least two - perhaps more - sketches, and he is coming in Thursday or Friday of this week, so I want something to show him.

I want the scale to be kept small in all the designs, and the two windows on the end to be a little different - a little more striking in scale - possibly with figures.

The windows they have now are made of colored cathedral - and they are terribly glaring. I suggested that we have them stippled with black or blue-black paint, but I also said that it was a fussy job and I didn't know that it could be done in winter without hazard of the paint all coming off on account of the condensation. I said I would send one of my men down to see just what could be done about it. It occurred to me afterwards that it might be better to have some kind of cheap black cloth, light weight woven material - tacked right over the windows. He is coming in Thursday or Friday, and I want to discuss it with him. Get good sized samples right away and put them over something of ours. It ought to be a gray or black or dark blue - rather thin - to keep out the glare. Perhaps cheesecloth."

An angel of prayer or praise, as an invitation to happy worship.

Two smaller nave "aisle" windows.

Two figures which may symbolize the heralding of the Messiah's coming and divine revelation of its significance to mankind:
   Saint John the Baptist and Saint John the Divine, or
   Two figures of the Saviour in the symbolic characters of the "Light of the World" (John 8:12) and the "True Vine" (John 15:1).

The main group of nave aisle windows, - five east, five west.

These may be dedicated as a group to the great teachings of Christ as expressed in the Parables. (In themselves beautiful and expressive symbols, the Parables are especially appropriate for development in the symbolic terms of color and light in design.)

Scheme I.

The Parables may be presented in simple medallions, three in each window, to form a rich and comprehensive summary of the teachings of Christ. In this scheme the Parables may be grouped so that each window will present a single theme. For example, three great parables of divine compassion and tenderness, the Prodigal Son, the Lost Sheep, and the Lost Piece of Money, may be used in one window.

Scheme II.

The theme of the Parables may be enriched by combination with ten of the great miracles of Christ, suggesting the fullness of His ministry which manifested itself in both word and deed. These two categories may occupy the two upper tiers of medallions, while the lower tier may symbolize the relationship of the Old and New Dispensations with ten related subjects from the Old Testament.

A typical window in this scheme might be as follows:
   Top Medallion: (Parable) The Good Samaritan.
   Middle Medallion: (Miracle) The Raising of Lazarus.
   Lower Medallion: (Old Testament) Elisha Raises the Shunammite's Son.

Scheme Three.

The upper tier of ten medallions may present a sequence of distinctive subjects from the life of Our Lord. These may be accompanied in the middle tier by Parables which reflect in mood and theme the subjects above. The lower tier may again be derived from the Old Testament, this time presenting subjects which are ancient prototypes of those from the life of Christ in the upper tier.

This scheme would lend itself to a beautifully expressive development of the eight Beatitudes, from the Sermon on the Mount, and also make it possible to emphasize the two end windows by a slightly different and more monumental treatment. This would be done by symbolizing the Sermon on the Mount in the first medallion, with a monumental treatment of the central figure of Christ, emphasizing this medallion. The succeeding eight top medallions would present subjects from Christ's life related to the eight Beatitudes, and the tenth, opposite the Sermon on the Mount, would present, in similarly distinctive treatment, one of the triumphant closing themes of Christ's ministry, the Resurrection, the Ascension, or the Last Judgement.
