A brick church, built 2 or 3 years ago. Decorations by Rambusch, including lighting fixtures. The Colonial Art Glass did the windows in the vestibules. The altar is not yet complete, and they are installing an organ.

Mr. Murphy suggested the possibility of making typical designs, with the idea that donors might be induced to give windows if they saw designs. The priest seems unwilling to consider it now, but Mr. Murphy thinks he could be persuaded. – See floor-plan, etc.

The windows now only have white protection glass, and wooden divisions....

For addresses of those to be notified as window progresses, see other side.
