General Information To be devoted to the Prophets: Jeremiah, Daniel; Ezekiel and Jonah.

(See photograph of the Frei windows on the east side.). Minister writes: "I think you should bear in mind that the windows on the East side are the most vivid windows in our Church, and I should think that these new windows should follow that scheme."

(For other windows see suggestions in letter of 1/27/59)

We are to make designs for the four other figures - Elijah and Elisha, Samuel and David. Include the tracery pieces in all the pairs.

Two additional Tower Windows: (North elevation).

Elijah bears the voice of Jehovah suggested by the symbol above, - the bright circle inscribed with the Hebrew letters forming the name. At his feet is one of the ravens that fed him. He carries a staff and wears the red mantle over the rustic garments of his refuge at the brook of Cherith.

Above Elisha is Elijah's fiery chariot. He holds Elijah's mantle. At his feet are the dividing waters of the Jordan.

Samuel's symbols are the Temple lamp and the roll of the Law. He is robed in the garments of the Temple.

David is represented with the Psalmist's harp and above is the sling and stone with which he slew Goliath.

Dec.4,1959. O.E.S. reports: "...tried to photograph the clerestory windows. They are pretty deep, with considerable dark pure blues and reds (not orange), with some small spots of turquoise green, emerald green, and a few small touches of gold. Heavy brown flesh, blue-white beards, gray-blue-whites (very little), heavily painted, but flicks of pure color. Plenty of blacks. Tracery very dark. Can hardly see border lines. See slides."

We have been studying designs for the tower clerestory windows and are sending you the rough color sketches, herewith. They are devoted to the prophets that Dr. Sant designated, - Jeremiah, Daniel, Ezekiel and Jonah. South elevation.

Jeremiah holds the chains as prophet of the captivity of Judah. His name is inscribed on the prophetic scroll, and the six pointed Star of the Old Testament is represented in the lancet head.

Daniel holds the starry wand as the princely prophet. At his feet is the lion, and at the top, the water and pulse which he ate in preference to the King's meat.

Ezekiel carries the flaming torch suggesting the brightness of his vision. He also has the prophetic scroll, and above his head is the wheel of his vision.

Jonah holds the ship and at his feet is the great fish. Above is a symbol of the city of Nineveh, whose destruction he prophesied.
