

We have completed our study of the design for the Greif Mausoleum window and are sending you the rough sketch herewith. It duplicates the window Mrs. Greif liked, adjusted to the rectangular shape.

It is based on a painting by Margaret Tarrant, adapted to the idiom of stained glass. Many birds and small animals are included, with the fawn in the dominant position. In the upper branches of the tree is the nest guarded by the parent birds.

The same text is suggested, - "The Lord God made them all".

We plan to use similar glass and it will have the same fine detail of execution as in the windows of the Belmont Church.
