“THERE must be a truer conception on the part of both men and women of the important place that household employments occupy in the economy of the world. . . . Public sentiment has not yet demanded that when a woman assumes the care of a household she shall possess at least a theoretical knowledge of household affairs. . . . But public sentiment will make such demand when the economic functions of housekeeping are understood.”—Lucy M. Salmon.

The School of Housekeeping

Outline of Course.

This course is designed to meet the needs of young college women and others who wish to fit themselves to manage a household on the best economic and hygienic basis. It should be of special value to the young woman who chooses as her profession in life the making of a home, and to the worker in College or Social Settlements. It will be greatly to the advantage of the pupil to reside in the School during the course, for she will thus be furnished unusual facilities for practice, observation and experiment.

To obtain full benefit from the following courses a knowledge of general Chemistry is required. For pupils entering without previous preparation in chemistry, a course of twelve lessons has been arranged, at an extra charge.
