

ADMISSION FREE

An MIT Open House has about 20,000 guests. The date this year: Saturday, April 10, from noon to 5 p.m. All over campus there'll be tours, lectures, films and exhibits. At the National Magnet Laboratory the entire high field magnet plant will be displayed. Visitors will see everything from irradiated food in Nutrition and Food Science to ship models on the waves of the Naval Arch. towing tank.

Perhaps for the first time ever, letters about Open House will go to over 1,000 active alumni in the Boston area, to all New England parents of students and prominent friends of the Institute. Posters, as well, will be sent to local R&D firms, colleges and high schools. Large posters will be hung in selected subway stations. And, for the month to come, professors, students and employees alike will prepare to show each other and their guests what is being done here in teaching and research.

CENTRAL

Even now, to a visitor dodging wheelbarrows, the Student Center is exciting inside and out. From what will be a dining room running across the entire east end of the main floor, you gaze through tinted windows at the broad facade of MIT and south to the Chapel sycamores. At the other end of the building, a multi-purpose room overlooks the skating rink and Kresge plaza. Both rooms are two stories high, and each has a small balcony. Above on the mezzanine floor will be a good-sized lounge, a grille with a wall of brick similar to that used in the Chapel, and a copper-hooded charcoal broiler for steaks. From there, when the weather's nice, you'll walk out on balconies

(surrounded by planters) which face the plaza and McCormick Hall. All front windows share this panoramic view, with now and then a glimpse of the river. Final inside vistas are becoming apparent, too. The mezzanine main lounge will face a spacious staircase rising from the main floor. And several ceilings have a waffle-like pattern, known as a grid, flat-slab construction; lights will be recessed in the exposed grids.

As focal point of MIT student life, the new Center will have remarkable facilities. Available on the basement and ground floor levels: A small U.S. Post Office, cashier's office, shoe repair shop, bowling and billiard area, and Charlie (The Tech Tailor).

The Coop barber shop will be on hand, with two more chairs; a variety store, Coop-run, will carry a selection of most items in the big store, and stay open evenings.

In the words of its manager, the MIT Coop will blossom from ugly duckling to swan with its move to Student Center. Covering roughly 3/4 of an acre on the ground floor, it will have about as much selling space as the present Harvard Sq. store. Existing departments will expand and new ones appear. Book and record sections will cover nearly 10,000 sq. ft. There'll be a woman's shop. A drug and sundries section will carry everything but prescription drugs. Departments for gifts, housewares and sporting goods will be included; and you'll be able to buy cameras, radios, television sets and small electric appliances. The new Coop will be open on Saturdays.

Slated to move to Student Center are all student activities from Walker Memorial except WTBS and WIMX. For the first time ever, some student groups like the musical clubs will have desks and office spaces of their own. In the Center, also, will be an entirely new student facility: A visual arts workshop in which students can sculpt, paint, print and from time to time have classes with visiting professionals.

BLOOD NEEDED

Our blood drive workers start in today. Recently in the Bush Room 50 chief solicitors heard final reminders about the drive (see photo).

Appointment forms which they'll distribute allow you three choices of times. The entire procedure takes about one hour.

Who can give: People between 21 and 59 inclusive, or those between 18 and 21 who, if they're not married, have written permission from a parent or guardian. Your health must be good, and the Red Cross will check that carefully. You can't give if you've donated within the past eight weeks, had a transfusion within six months, or weigh less than 110 pounds.

To insure the smoothest operation, donors are asked to come by appointment only. If you really can't schedule ahead, you may phone the reception desk during the drive for a last-minute appointment. That will be Ext. 4277 on March 22-26 only.

MEDICAL NEWS

From Dr. Samuel D. Clark, associate director of the Medical Department, comes this news: One of the advances of modern medicine is the early detection and complete cure, when so detected, of cancer of the cervix in women. This simple, painless and reliable procedure is now being offered by the MIT Medical Department. The so-called "Pap" test will be done by the chief nurse of the Infirmary, Mrs. Bertha O'Sullivan, from 11 to 12 daily by appointment. She may be reached at Ext. 4485 from 8 to 3.

The only charge for the test is $5 for actual reading of the slides by the hospital laboratory. While any MIT women are eligible, the Medical Department strongly urges that those over the age of 35 take advantage of this important diagnostic examination.

HERE AND THERE

In the South Pacific, where Lincoln Lab people are working on Project PRESS, Jon Huntington, assistant to the head of Division 2, made a visit recently. He stepped onto the soil of Roi-Namur Island on Feb. 1 exactly 21 years from D-Day, when he first arrived there as a Marine Sergeant. He found, still standing, the Japanese Admiral's headquarters and an adjacent bunker.

The Technology Dames (wives of students) will hold their annual Fashion Show, Monday, March 15 at the MIT Faculty Club at 8 p.m. There will be an admission fee, and the show is open to the public.

Huntington on Roi-Namur

MIT publications have won many awards. This year the 1960 President's Report, designed by Jacqueline Shepard Casey, and a 1963 Summer Session brochure, "Random Vibration," designed by Ralph Coburn, were chosen for an exhibit called "Typomundus 20." It represents the best graphic arts work of the 20th century, chosen from entries of all countries. Starting in Toronto and New York, the exhibit will be shown internationally. And -- in the Louvre Museum in Paris this spring -- MIT publications will appear in an American Institute of Graphic Arts exhibit, touring this continent and Europe for two years.

Launching

The MIT Student Furniture Exchange at 224 Albany St. will open again on April 2. Hours will be 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays. To make an appointment before the April opening, you may call Sally Canty, 868-6323 between 9:30 and 10:30 a.m., Tuesdays and Fridays.

On a shivery March 1, the MIT crew turned out for its first official practice on the Charles. Actually, some had been rowing a couple of weekends before. It will probably be the last season started from the old Boat House. Plans for a new one are in the works.

At 3 p.m. on Sunday, March 14, in Kresge, the MIT Glee Club, the Douglass College Chapel Choir, soloists, and members of the Boston Symphony will present a performance of Haydn's "The Creation." Prof. Klaus Liepmann will conduct.

Tickets for the concert are $1 and on sale in Bldg. 10 lobby; you may also call Kresge, Ext. 2910.
