WHAT'S IN A NAME

In a year marked by innovation in MIT's curriculum, new buildings also abound, providing the increased space necessary for the continually evolving community that MIT is. One building was dedicated last week and another will formally be named this weekend.

The Vannevar Bush Building. At ceremonies last Friday afternoon, in "a salute to a colleague who has made immense contributions to science and engineering, to MIT, and to the nation," Dr. Killian dedicated Bldg. 13 as the Vannevar Bush Building for the Center for Materials Science and Engineering. The Bush Building forms a new facade for the burgeoning north campus area which will include centers for space research and for advanced engineering study when completed. It is the largest single academic structure to be built at MIT since the main complex was constructed 50 years ago.

Dr. Bush, Honorary Chairman of the MIT Corporation, is a statesman of science well known to government and industry (which support the center). His career has spanned industry, education and government service. During World War II he was Director of the Office of Scientific Research and Development which mobilized the enormous effort needed for military research.

At 75, Dr. Bush is active in the affairs of MIT and in his own research on such diverse projects as designing and improving a new type hydroplane boat (successfully launched this summer) and designing and fabricating plastic appliances for heart surgery.

...for long-awaited Student Center, now the Stratton Building.

The Julius Adams Stratton Building. At its dedication on Saturday, the Student Center will formally become the Julius Adams Stratton Building in recognition of Dr. Stratton's abiding interest in student welfare. Nearly ten years have passed since planning for a center for student activities first began, and Dr. Stratton has given wholehearted support to all efforts to bring it into existence.

The dedication, planned and carried out by the undergraduate student government, will take place at 2 o'clock on Saturday and will be followed by an open house at which the entire community is invited to view the new facilities. Other dedication day features include a concert by Cannonball Adderly and his Sextet on the Kresge Plaza in the afternoon (in Kresge if the weather is bad) and a dance for students and their dates in the Sala de Puerto Rico in the evening.

Designed by Prof. Eduardo Catalano (Architecture) who also designed many of the furnishings, the Stratton Building contains about three acres of floor space. Many of its lounges and other facilities will be open around the clock except for cleaning and maintenance closings, and students involved in activities housed there will have keys to the activity offices.

The Grover M. Hermann Building. At the other end of the campus, the Grover M. Hermann Building will have its official opening on Sunday with a reception for 600 former Sloan Fellows and their wives. The occasion is the annual three-day convocation of the Sloan Fellows who return to the campus for expert briefings on the latest developments in management and the closely allied social sciences.

Named for a principal donor, who is chairman of the Martin-Marietta Corp., the Hermann Building was also designed by Prof. Catalano, architect of the Eastgate apartment tower shortly to rise on the east campus complex. The new building brings together the Sloan School, the Departments of Economics and of Political Science and the Center for International Studies, pointing up the close relationship of technological advance with social, economic and political factors in the modern world.

UP AND COMING

A new exhibition, "Five Photographers and a Painter," has opened in the Creative Photography Gallery on the third floor of the Armory. The photographs, by young photographers, cover a number of subjects viewed by the creative camera, and the paintings are works of Prof. Robert Preusser (Architecture). Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday-Friday, and 1 to 6 p.m. on Sundays, through the duPont entrance.

The MIT Press is offering a limited number of books to the MIT community at 60% off list price. For four days only, Oct. 11-15, the collection will be available at the Press, Room E19-720. Bibliophiles who have questions may call Anne Locker, Ext. 5253, or just go to the sale.

The active Graduate Student Council has announced the re-opening of "The Thirsty Ear" in Ashdown house, with folksinger Paula Willmore on Oct. 8 and 9, and the Oxford Street Stampers, a jazz group, on Oct. 15 and 16. An autumn dance, with music by Larry Lane, in the Faculty Club will also be held Oct. 16. Admission, including two drinks, is $3 per couple.

An early morning ribbon-cutting last Monday opened the new U.S. Post Office on the lower level of the Stratton Building. Boston Postmaster Ephraim Martin and Undergraduate Assoc. President Bill Byrn completed the formalities before an audience consisting of MIT Vice President Philip Stoddard, Cambridge Mayor Edward Crane and city councilman Prof. Thomas Mahoney (Humanities). Limited quantities of stamps may still be purchased at the Cashier's Office (E-19-215), but the outgoing mail facility in Bldg. 24 has closed. The new Post Office will provide complete postal service to the Institute.
