

LIGHT FANTASTIC

Come five o'clock on weekdays, the Institute empties as its people resume their private lives. But sometimes it takes a few extra minutes to finish the day's business and get desks cleared off. Fortunately that was the case last Tuesday when the blackout blanketed the north-eastern U.S. On hand to guide MIT through the dark were: Philip Stoddard, vice president for operations and personnel; Jerome Barraford, superintendent of power and utilities; Miles Cowen, superintendent, of building services; and Lt. James Olivieri of Campus Patrol. Donald Whiston, general superintendent was missing, but not for long. Having just returned from a hunting trip, he was about to have a shower when the call came. When he arrived at MIT, he said he made it from his home in Kingston, "forty miles in forty minutes." This team, together with the skeleton night crew, quickly checked on emergency needs: the Infirmary, Clinic and Animal Labs had high priority.

The biggest problem in the darkened Northeast was getting power to start power company generators, and MIT supplied the necessary power to get Cambridge's equipment going. Verner Johnson, assistant to the chief engineer, and his staff were responsible for this feat which restored Cambridge's lights at least an hour ahead of when they would have been on otherwise. Paul Blanchard, chief electrician, and all but one of the Institute electricians worked far into the night taking care of necessary switching in the Cambridge-MIT interchange and restoring power in all of the MIT buildings. It would be impossible to mention all of the MIT people, including students, who played a hand in keeping the Institute running smoothly in the dark.

UNITED FUND AT MIDMARK

Checks and cards from as far away as Canada and California have arrived from absent MITers who want to be counted in on this year's campaign. Campaign Coordinator Ruth Dawson (Assistant Bursar) reported last week that at mid-point in the campaign about 44% of the returns were in, representing about 44% of MIT's goal of $113,000, so there's still much room for improvement. Instrumentation and several academic departments are doing outstanding jobs in getting reports and returns in promptly, Miss Dawson said, and all solicitors are getting good marks for filing clear and accurate reports.

Both MIT and the Massachusetts Bay United Fund are trying very hard to complete their campaigns on time this year. Since the official close of MIT's campaign is tomorrow (Nov. 18), Miss Dawson and her helpers will appreciate any efforts solicitors make to return cards and checks as soon as possible.

SCHOLARLY UPRISING

Raising the amount of tuition assistance and broadening the field of applicants has caused a sharp increase in the number of people studying work-related courses this year. For the past three years, an average of 408 employees have been enrolled in the Tuition Assistance Plan, but the boost in the maximum reimbursement from $200 to $300 per calendar year has sent the figure to 497 so far in 1965. In addition, the Tuition Assistance Plan for members of the research and administrative staffs, inaugurated this fall, has quickly found 150 adherents, about half of whom are studying at MIT.

Particularly popular areas for study among employees are accounting and data processing. Computers have become so useful that employees from throughout the Institute are taking advantage of tuition assistance to learn computer techniques. Most popular schools for this are Bentley, Northeastern, B.U. and Suffolk.

Brochures and application forms for both Tuition Assistance Plans have been distributed to all department and laboratory headquarters. With the second semester approaching, this is the time to discuss your educational plans with your supervisor.

A FOURTH FOR BRIDGE

Life Masters and novices alike are invited to an organizational meeting of the Instrumentation Lab Bridge Club to be held at noon today in the second floor classroom at 75 Cambridge Pkwy. Shuttle service is available every 15 minutes from 68 Albany St. for all interested on-campus bridge players. If you can't make it to the meeting, but want to be counted in anyway, call Sam Smith at ext. 1454.

LIVELY INVITATION

As a prelude to dedication ceremonies for the new Whitaker Building, scheduled early in December, an Open House for the Institute community will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 19, in the Center for Life Sciences.

The Departments of Biology and of Nutrition and Food Science are the principal inhabitants of the Center for Life Sciences, but, because of the interdisciplinary nature of the research, members of several other departments are also involved. All of the laboratories will be open for inspection during the open house, and everyone in the buildings will be on hand to answer questions and explain procedures. Refreshments will be served to hungry guests in Rooms 56-201 and 56-510.

IN SERVICE TO THE COMMONWEALTH

More than 1,000 jobs will be available tomorrow (Nov. 18) in the Lobby of Bldg. 10 when the Commonwealth Service Corps comes to recruit volunteers for its programs in social action for Massachusetts. The C.S.C., the nation's first domestic peace corps, recently completed a very successful first year during which some 700 volunteers invested more than 240,000 hours in 30 projects.

Corpsmen may work full or part time and are reimbursed for their expenses. Housewives and senior citizens are encouraged to apply as well as students and working people. Additional information on the programs is available through MIT's Social Service Committee (Room 441, Student Center, ext. 2894), or from the Commonwealth Service Corps regional office at 15 School Street in Boston.

THE ENTERTAINERS

After last year's splashing sold-out success, the popular diving trio of Rick Kimball, Ron O'Brien and Frank Gorman returns this Saturday evening (Nov. 20) with Aqua Capers '65, sponsored by the MIT Swim Club. Also featured on the program will be the Wellesley Water Ballet in a synchronized swimming act and MIT's Logarithms with song specialties. Two performances--at 7 p.m. ($1.50) and 9 p.m. ($1.75)--will be given in Alumni Pool, and tickets may be reserved at ext. 4291.

Making a big splash: Aqua Capers '65.

Competing for attention this weekend, the Gilbert and Sullivan Society will present "Yeomen of the Guard," Gilbert and Sullivan's only tragicomedy, in Kresge Auditorium at 8:30 on Friday and Saturday nights. The operetta is being directed by Steven Gilborn, instructor in Humanities, and Herb Meily (Lincoln) and Ellen Stevens (Physics) are playing leading roles. Other members of the cast and chorus are students from MIT and coeds from surrounding schools. Tickets may be purchased in the Lobby of Bldg. 10, or reserved at ext. 2910.

FLYING HIGH

When freshman Jim Yankaskas arrived at MIT this fall, he noticed the lack of a flying club and immediately set about correcting the deficiency. He quickly found materials and manpower to build a booth at the Activities Midway during Freshman Weekend and gathered together a group of about 20 flight-minded members. The MIT Flying Club, now a going concern, is open to all members of the community, both licensed pilots and learners. Monthly meetings, which feature speakers or movies on aviation, are usually held in the Spofford Room (Rm. 1-236). Special rates for plane rental and flight instruction have been arranged at Hanscom Field, where several models of Cessnas may be reserved by members. Any interested pilots or potential pilots may get in touch with Jim or Hank Perritt at ext. 3782 or with Bill Sadler at 868-0082.

MMMM GOOD!

This is the day to abandon the machines in favor of home-made sandwiches and potato salad--not to mention cookies and brownies--from the annual MIT Dames Bake Sale. From 8 a.m. until sell-out, the Dames will be dispensing all kinds of goodies in the Lobby of Bldg. 10 in their yearly fund-raising drive. Last year the sale yielded nearly $450, good evidence of a healthy MIT appetite.

IT'S A BARGAIN!

An All-Institute sale will be held at the Student Furniture Exchange (224 Albany St.) tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Featured items include stoves, refrigerators and double desks, but everything is reduced for clearance.
