MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY October 15, 1969

As press time approaches, Thursday's office is lively, indeed.

PAPER IMPRESSION

Lack of money can be made up for with imagination, enthusiasm and energy as the staff of the young newspaper, Thursday, proved this summer. Given a large, high-ceilinged room on the second floor of Walker, the Thursday staff invested only $400 (but about 200 man-hours of labor) and came up with what may be the most attractive newspaper office around. But aesthetics is only part of the overhaul. What's more important is how the room works, and it is highly functional.

Basic materials included wrecking lumber, plywood doors and carpet remnants. The result is a three-level room which uses space with great economy. The various aspects of newspaper production are clearly defined and relate well with one another. Nor are creature comforts overlooked--there's a built-in refrigerator and cola dispenser and a cozy conference area complete with a working fireplace. If you're looking for some bright ideas in redecorating, plan a visit to Thursday's office next time you have lunch at Walker.

A PAT FOR THE PATROL

For many of us, the thought of the Campus Patrol conjures up a fellow in the parking booth who waves us into our appointed garages each morning, or the man who greets us as we go into the Bursar's office to cash a check. That is what they do, but it's really a very small part of the overall activity of their service. Service is the key word--the Patrol's mission is as much to promote our safety and welfare as the regular police functions of protecting people and property and maintaining order.

Because MIT is essentially a small city, police problems which arise here are pretty much the same as those faced by any city of 15,000. This means that the daily duties--24 hours a day, seven days a week--carried out by the Campus Patrol members are many and varied. On the mundane side, the Patrol handles some 9,000 parking violations each year and gets frequent requests to open apartments in Eastgate or Westgate when the occupants have forgotten or lost their keys. The Patrol's ambulance also comes in for plenty of usage--it made nearly 400 runs from the campus to local hospitals last year alone.

But, like other cities this size, we have some crime, too, particularly theft, which is on the rise all over the nation. Following careful investigation earlier this year, Sargeant Walter Lee and Officers John Engelhardt and Raphael Gallerani retrieved nearly $30,000 worth of Institute property from one cache this summer. Included in the loot were items ranging from a $10,000 minicomputer to adding machines, telephones and even a tapestry.

Less spectacular thievery is more common, of course, and much of it goes unreported, but the Patrol follows through on every complaint it gets. Preventive action is also part of the Patrol's responsibility. Many secretaries were appreciative recently when patrolmen visited every office in the main complex to warn that a purse snatcher was roaming through the halls.

The Charles is a popular place on fine fall days.

CALENDAR JOTTINGS

Institute sailors are invited to register for the annual staff sailing races, scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. on October 21. Each department entering must supply two two-person teams, and one person in each boat must have a racing skipper rating from the Nautical Association. Registration deadline is Monday, October 20. Register with Professor Jerome H. Milgram, Ext. 3681, in the Department of Naval Architecture and Marine Engineering, race sponsors.

The Tech Dames, an organization of some 400 student wives, will hold their first meeting of the year on October 28 at 8 p.m. in the Sala de Puerto Rico with a welcoming address by President Johnson. The Dames' monthly meetings and activity groups--bridge, cooking, crafts, etc.--offer a great way for newcomers to meet new friends.

The MIT Film Society is presenting a series of Monday evening movies ranging from film classics to experimental films, John Ford to Andy Warhol, this term. All movies are shown at 8 and 10 p.m. in Room 10-250, except for October 27, when any amateur film makers at MIT who would like to show their work are invited to do so. Tickets are $1, but the open screening is free. Watch the bulletin boards for announcement of film titles.

AUTUMN RITUAL

As surely as the leaves turn red and gold each year, we know that it's time for the United Fund to make its appearance. This year's drive, under the chairmanship of Professor Edwin R. Gilliland, will begin October 23 and formally close on November 28. The total MBUF goal is $14.5 million and it is hoped that MIT can supply $150,000 toward this goal. Through streamlined administration, more than ninety percent of United Fund receipts go directly to the 225 service agencies in the 64 cities and towns of the Massachusetts Bay area.

CLEAN AIR CAMPAIGN

People who work in the Ford Building--and other workers in the Kendall Square area--have been bothered several times lately by noxious fumes being emitted by one of the industries in the neighborhood. After sniffing acetone-scented air for several hours, Muriel Cooper, design director at the MIT Press, decided to take action. Recommendations from the Occupational Medical Service and the Safety Office led her to call the Massachusetts Air Pollution Commission and the Cambridge Health Department. She reports that both were interested in taking action, and the Cambridge Health Department sent an investigator over right away. Next time you see some active air pollution, give these agencies a call. It works.

ACCOUNTING MADE

MIT Credit Union accounts ending in 8 and 9 have been audited as of September 30, 1969, and corresponding quarterly statements have been stamped with requests that members check their statements and report any exceptions directly to the Supervisory Audit Committee. Joseph Cullinan, chairman of this committee, urges all members with accounts ending in 8 and 9 to examine their statements carefully. Notify him at the Payroll Office, Ext. 4491 or Room E 19-515, if no statement has been received.

NOTEWORTHY

On October 2, NASA announced public service awards to several key people for their work on the Apollo program. Among those receiving honors were: Dr. Charles Stark Draper, David G. Hoag and Ralph R. Ragan of the Instrumentation Laboratory, each "for his outstanding contributions as a key leader in the government-industry team which made possible the exceptional success of the Apollo Program. The scientific and technological capability demonstrated by the flight of Apollo 11 has opened for all mankind the new era of interplanetary travel."

At the invitation of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, the same David Hoag, who is director of the Instrumentation Apollo Group, and Dr. Richard H. Battin, who was in charge of the development of the programming of Apollo computers, are on a two-week tour of Soviet scientific centers.

Last week Dr. Salvador E. Luria, Sedgwick Professor of Biology, received the 1969 Louisa Gross Horwitz Prize, given by Columbia University, for outstanding research in biology. He shared the award with Dr. Max Delbruck of Caltech.

PUZZLE SOLVED

Those who walk along the path from Building 26 to Building 20 have been puzzled recently by the addition to the courtyard of a small, concrete sarcophagus-shaped object, just sitting there. The mystery was unravelled last week when the sculpture, "Cenotaphe," was installed on its new permanent perch. Cenotaphe, given to MIT two years ago by Leon A. Kolker, '31, is a handsome stainless steel work by the French sculptor Jean Robert Ipousteguy.

And, while we're in the neighborhood of the Compton Laboratories, if you've been wondering about the new furnishings in what used to be the Computation Center, we've got information on that, too. It's going to be a new reading room for the Department of Physics.
