

Mr. Philip Griffin

Street Interview

This is the part of Boston that I like the {C T} best, this block and the one we just passed. Sometimes it seems to be to be either quaint or kind of straining to be quaint. But thats not really fair because I thought of that before. I'm looking at the wide {P} sidewalk and I don't know, it isn't really very {C} interesting section of town, is it? I see a horribly {D} ugly church, {B -} Arl. St. church. And this building over here is where I used to {B} work, 334 Boylston. This is a pleasant {C+} intersection here because of the {SP} common on the left, occupying a quarter of your view. The brick {D-} pavement is very uncomfortable to walk on sometimes. Neals of {B-} California seems to be very {B} {A} artificial because its not really of California, having lived in California. This reminds me of New York, {C} the {D} street with Central Park on the other side {B-} (The Ritz). I see another {B} church on the right, and an awful lot of {T} Cadillacs. Probably very nice {D} women's {UT} clothing stores. And on the other side a rather pleasant little group of {B} stores, shop, spelled shoppe. Well the shops weren't obviously built that way, they were built as residence first, that is quite obvious for most of them. But still its probably more pleasant that way, at least they've done a job of it. And there is another building, {B} {D} Bonwit Teller, that doesn't look like a store at all; it looks like a public library, or something. Why a {S-} filthy alley. Horrible {C} contrast to the two blocks we walked on. And this is an indication that Boston is having difficulty in keeping its streets clean. {P-A} Seemstresses, sweatshop. This alley obviously hasn't been cleaned, never been cleaned in the last ten or fifteen years. The {S} smell of gasoline (crossing Arl.) Now his is quite a {S} contrast to the alley we've just been in. In the summertime its probably very pleasant. I see the capitol {B} of {C+D} Mass. ahead of us with the golden dome. I've never been along here before, except when I was very young. Cast Iron {SF} railing. {margin: not}
