

Description: "Each prophet holds the scroll of his prophetic writings and bears his distinctive symbol. The sorrowful Jeremiah has the chain to symbolize his inspired service during the period of captivity, - the priestly Ezekiel, the lighted torch, symbol of religious zeal, - and the princely Daniel, the starred sceptre to symbolize his descent from the Kings of Judah. The kneeling angelic figures in the bases bear related symbols, - again the chains for Jeremiah; the censer for Ezekiel; and the crown for Daniel. Surrounding the figures and outlining the fine pure blue of the background are decorative canopies relating these to the neighboring windows. Through the borders of these canopies, I have suggested little figures of related Old Testament Kings and Patriarchs that will also recall the ancestry of Christ in the tradition of the line of descent from Jesse. These will include David, Solomon, Roboam, Abia, Asa, Josaphat, Joran, Joash, Ozias, Joatham, Achaz, Ezekias, Manasses, Amon, Joseas, Jechonias, Eleazar, Mathan, Jacob, Joseph."

In the Isaiah window, Isaiah, the evangelical prophet, also bears the pen as he listens to divine inspiration symbolized by the nimbed dove. The kneeling angelic figure in the base panel holds the tongs and coal of heavenly fire with which the Seraph touched his lips in token of his divine eloquence. Isaiah is robed in fine clear white and brilliant ruby, mediaeval color symbols of purity and divine love, - while the rich blue of the background suggests heavenly contemplation. The figure is surrounded by a decorative canopy relating it to the neighboring windows. Through the borders of this canopy I have suggested little figures of related Old Testament Kings and Patriarchs, etc. In the base is the memorial inscription, and the crosses of the Sisterhood of the Holy Nativity are balanced at either side of the upper portion of the inscription, forming an effective part of the entire design.

*Inscriptions : The first two panels are for Dr. and Mrs. Moore - the first panel to be inscribed: "Charles A. Moore, D.D.
Pastor 1911-1936"

The second panel - "And his wife
Jean Bailey Moore".

The third panel - "In Loving Memory
Charles D. Crosby 1863-1939
Miriam L. Crosby 1862-1926" (See letter of June 7, 1943).