General Information Leaded glass panel, about 1 foot high by 6 feet long, with letters: "First Presbyterian Church", in same character as windows.

Panel is to be on exterior, framed, with cabinet, and illuminated for night and day visibility.

Perhaps have the lettering with the name of the Church, worked out in leaded glass, set in an interesting decorative border. We are rather concerned about the clarity of such an arrangement in the daylight. It would take a pretty strong source of illumination to compete with bright daylight, especially in sunny weather. ... It seems that we may have to use some glass in the nature of white opalescent that will contrast with the field in daylight in order to have it legible.

Mr. Corrough writes: "There is now a sign in place which is made of a sheet
