

Place Ogdensburg, N.Y.

Building Saint John's Episcopal Church

Date of Completion June 1, 1967

Price: $1,500.00

Persons Interested

Donor: Franklin R. Little and Friends

Loss $640.75 = .4267

Minister The Rev. John R. Ramsey

Denomination

Architect

Vents

Position in Church North Aisle window, 2nd from the entrance

Height from floor

Protection Glass

Groove Rabbet

Metal Stone Wood

Exposure North

Footage 16 1/4 Feet @ $92.30

Inscription In loving memory
Janet Penoyer Little 1899-1963
by Franklin R. Little and Friends

Design wanted

Staging

Templates

Blueprints

General Information Arts Window

The lower medallion is devoted to Shakespeare writing his plays. The little insert of the balcony scene suggests Romeo and Juliet.

The upper medallion is devoted to Michaelangelo working on his statue of David.

Pegasus, the winged Horse of the Muses, is designed in the quatrefoil above.

Homer and Dante are indicated in the small medallions between the large ones; with the traditional masks of Comedy and Tragedy in the lower positions.

This plan is in accord with several of the present windows, but it does not introduce Biblical themes as in others. We found it difficult to readily symbolize Biblical arts and letters unless it be through David, sweet singer of Israel, or the wise King Solomon, builder of the Temple. We have prepared a separate insert of the former as a possible alternative.

Still other ideas might be to introduce one of the great ecclesiastic composers, such as Merbeck, Palestrina, Bach, Handel, or Haydn.

We also thought of St. Dunstan, patron of artists and craftsmen, at his forge, pinching the devil's nose, as we did in the arts bay window in the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine; but this seemed a little rugged for the one memorialized.